The German Emperor visited Oostend last week with Prince Dietrich and General Falkenhayn. The visit was unobserved in the deepest secrecy, and was unexpected even by the highest officers.

The enemy renewed his attack near Belms, and was repulsed by the Allies. A further message says that the Pops in an attempt to initiate some towards peace.

King Albert replied: "I will never lay down my sword while my country is in peril." The German reinforcements endangering Italy have reached 10, 12 miles from the plateau of Odi, dominating the marshy plains on both sides of the Mincio River.

The correspondent of the Associated Press in Constantinople reports the Turkish lines in Cilicia.

It is estimated that 115,000 British in the theatre region are opposed by 120,000 Turks. Mr. Lloyd George is expected to arrive.

As Athens papers state that the Allies on Thursday repulsed the Turkish attack at Belms and Kragujevac, indicating severe losses.

like are on their own frontiers. Great Britain cannot limit her energies while the agents of sedition and corruption are at work attempting to stir up a new war in the dependencies of her vast Empire.

It was natural that British statesmen, while they were preparing an army which has excited the wonder of friend and foe alike, should forget that they had entered upon an era of organic change in the national life. Even if they had realised that an army cannot be constituted as a ship may be built at will, they would

I Great Britain is to win, she must exhibit the spirit of a nation which has been able to win, with a comparatively small section in the nation, first under Pitt, and then under Castlereagh, carried her through the Napoleonic war, the spirit which, beginning in lethargy, and gathering confidence as it goes, rises to the level of sacrifice and heroism beyond all temptations of gain or disappointments. Happily, our reports agree that such a spirit has now permeated every section of the British people, and has united the industrial classes with the government. The nation has now fully grasped the idea that whether the war is to last two years or three, it will never be ended until we have won.
